An educational program to assist adults with cancer
in talking to their children.

A diagnosis of cancer in your family can lead to many new questions and concerns. Helping your children cope is often one of the most important and basic issues. For this reason, Moncrief Cancer Institute offers “What Do I Say” an education program to assist adults with cancer in talking to their children. This 90 minute program will offer you the opportunity to hear useful guidelines and discuss your questions or concerns. The program will consist of presentations, videos and discussion. Educational literature and resources will be provided to attendees. This very special program is offered to you at no charge. For information and / or to make reservations please contact:
